Summary of lesson VIII

Women and Development

By Leela Dubey

Women are an important part of a society. For a proper development, it is very necessary that women are made a part of the development. If we look back, we find that in olden days, women had an important part in every activities of the society. There was equality between the two genders. But gradually discrimination occurred.

It was thought that women was meant to be inside homes, even though we all know their role in India's war of independence. We could see and hear many incident's of women's being tortured. They had to suffer patriarchy. Even those women who came out to work for their families, were given less pay, as compared to men, for the same work.

But with the rise of feminism, a movement arose, in favor of the women. A society is considered best and healthier, where there is no discrimination between gender or class, every individual has its own part to play in the development of the Society, women have suffered due to a number of factors. We were unable to recognize a woman's share in the society for its development. A woman runs the household, take care of its members, but was never acclaimed as the head of the family. Women suffered discrimination at work place.

We all know that men and women are just like two wheels of a cart, and a cart can't move, if it's both the wheels are not properly taken care of. So it's high time, we should understand a woman's contribution to the society and do every means to bring scope and upliftment to the women, who have immense power for the development of the society.
